Please join us for another stimulating and clinically useful educational program that highlights some of the latest research findings that are directly applicable to clinical practice.

This year we are focusing on e-Mental Health tools that can be immediately used in clinical practice, and updates on clinical interventions for mood disorders, including mindfulness, transcranial magnetic stimulation, and pharmacotherapy. We have selected speakers who are widely praised for their clear and effective deliveries.

As usual, we will involve people with lived experience in our educational activities. We will open the program this year with a free public forum on e-Mental Health and mood disorders in youth, featuring Mr. Aidan Scott and Dr. Matthew Chow.

Registration fees include a light lunch (available 11:15am to 12:00noon) and coffee breaks.

We look forward to seeing you there!

Director, Mood Disorders Centre,
Djavad Mowafaghian Centre for Brain Health
